

Puzzled

Sound Bites

by Dustin Foley

These politicians are eager to make their voices heard! They've started to use creative language in their speeches, which means we briefly get to hear something that could strike a new cord with voters. However, each statement also contains a small taste of their hidden agenda.

P E □ A R

□ □ □ □ □

"I hope farmers will voice their support for the couple of agricultural bills I'm presenting to congress on their behalf."

"I've spoken with families that had children whose upbringings bore a distinct resemblance to my own."

□ □ □ □ □

"My message needs to get spread from us to ardent supporters of my opponent, who have gathered together his soldiers at another rally nearby."

□ □ □ □ □

"As a child, I myself knew the pain of dealing with rather cold winter nights."

□ □ □ □ □

"There's no time to waste faking qualifications and experience when the future of the country is what gets put at risk."

□ □ □ □ □

"If you're not registered for our party yet, be sure to become a member, or you risk letting your concerns get put far below everyone else's."

□ □ □ □ □

"I'm inspired by the never-ending constant support of my wonderful spouse."

□ □ □ □ □

"We need to save our environment, and preserving the habitat of these antlered animals is an enormous step in the right direction."

□ □ □ □ □

"There's no way to measure the depths to which my detractors will sink to attempt to find a photograph lumping me together with so-called special interest groups."

□ □ □ □ □

"I spent half the weekend hearing expensive proposals for NASA from sound aerospace engineers."

□ □ □ □ □

"I insisted on having my car routed through the heart of your beautiful city, because your marvelous monuments are worth their weight in diamonds."

□ □ □ □ □

"I've seen people all across the globe getting ready for my inevitable triumph over my opponent."

□ □ □ □ □

"The insincere half-truths and outright lies spouted by my opponent are continuous, like some sort of soap opera."

□ □ □ □ □

"We must selflessly strive to always lend others the strength to persevere when they so desperately need it."