

Recap

Sporting Goods	Potpourri	Science	Food	Architecture	Currency
This vulcanized rubber is served over ice. (6,4)	These Eastern eating utensils are also the name of a simple piano piece. (10)	These plus protons and neutrons make up atoms. (9)	According to GLaDOS, it will be delicious. (4)	This structure was built for the 1889 World's Fair. (6,5)	Two bits or fifty ha'pennies. (7)
It is both ammunition and punctuation. (6)	Telegraph operators use dots and these. (6)	Bees are fond of this polygon. (7)	This popular baked good is prepared with lye. (5)	It was the tallest building in The City until the '70s. (6,5,8)	The isle of Yap has large currency made of this. (5)
These "birds" are targeted with a shotgun. (4,7)	Examples include cat's eye, oxblood, and aggie. (7)	This analog calculator helped win WWII and put us on the moon. (5,4)	This may be candy or may be a personal floatation device. (4,5)	From this iconic tower, you can see four mountain ranges and a sound. (5,6)	Canada recently discontinued this coin. (5)
This is the tool of scullers. (3)	This cream-filled legal defense spawned the White Night Riots. (7)	Galileo used one of these to study the heavens. (9)	Examples include Chicago, Hawaiian, & wood-fired (5)	Frank Lloyd Wright designed this temple of the spirit. (10)	$800
These were used by Peltasts during war, athletes during peace. (8)	This geometric solid can give you a critical hit. (11)	This vertical conveyor, described by Arthur C. Clark, reaches orbit. (5,8)	"As American as baseball and ____." (5,3)	In 1968, this structure was "discovered" at 3,000,000 BC, 1999, and 2001. (8)	$1000

And we are back from our commercial break! Let me tell you, this round of Jeopardy! has been exciting and is shaping up to be a great game! Let's review the plays we've seen so far.

- Ana started at the top of the board with Sporting Goods.
- Brian quickly took control and answered the next two questions.
- Curtis grabbed two more Sporting Goods questions then dashed over to Food, where he answered the first question.
- Ana cleared out the remainder of the Food category.
- Brian took control and circled around to Architecture.
- Curtis took the next two questions.
- Ana then took the final two Architecture questions.
- Brian zipped through the first three questions of Potpourri.
- Curtis grabbed the remainder of the category.
- Ana dotted over to Science and answered the first three questions.
- Brian cleared out Science.
- Curtis is now working his way through Currency.