

Being a lifeguard can often be boring, so Jack and Richard passed the time by playing shuffleboard.

Lord knows they needed the practice! The outcomes of the games are below, although the last puck from each round is missing. The last shot was always alone in a missing section. Place the missing shots.

When they had finished, Jack said to Richard something along the lines of these games being the highlight of his morning. They split the yellow pucks from the black, then stowed all the pucks neatly away.

(What else was in the community center's supply closet?)
